

FIREMEN FALL

Overcome by the Smoke of Oil and Resin on the Amsterdam, Which Was Afire in the East River.

BRAVELY RAN TO DECK OF THE BURNING VESSEL.

Capt. Judge and Miller and Martha So Seriously Overcome that They Were Sent Away in Ambulances.

Several firemen were overcome by smoke and removed to hospitals by a fire in the hold of the iron bark Amsterdam, lying at Pier 12, foot of Old Slip and South Street, East River, this afternoon.

The firemen so seriously overcome that it was deemed best to take them to hospitals were Capt. Judge and Firemen Miller and Martha, all of Engine Company No. 16. All displayed splendid courage in fighting the flames, and if the bark is not a total loss it will be owing to their efforts. They repeatedly ran to the deck of the burning vessel in the face of a deadly and all-pervading smoke, for the fire was in the cargo of oil and resin with which the bark was laden.

Nearly Ready to Sail.

The Amsterdam was nearly ready to sail for an Australian port, when one of the sailors discovered smoke issuing from the hold. He ran to the pier, shouting the alarm, and in a few minutes Engine Company No. 16 responded, as did the fireboat William L. Strong. Capt. Judge and his men ran to the burning vessel with ladders of hose, but had been at work only a few minutes when great clouds of black smoke drove them away. The burning oil and resin combined caused all the firemen to suffer intensely. Capt. Judge himself was overcome on three different occasions, but so soon as he fainted water was dashed in his face and he would resume his work. This was also true of Miller and Martha.

The smoke was so dense that for blocks around the streets were as black as if darkness had fallen, and this added to the difficulty experienced by the firemen. They were given no aid by the members of the crew of the bark, for each one of the sixteen had gathered up his property at the first alarm and deserted the ship.

Beached on Jersey Flats.

The William L. Strong steamed up close to the Amsterdam, and directed a six-inch stream into the hold, but as this did not serve to extinguish the flames it was decided, to prevent the possibility of the pier and other shipping catching fire, to tow the bark into midstream. This was finally done by the crew of the Strong, and ultimately the bark was beached at the Jersey flats.

Capt. Collins, of the Amsterdam, said he had no idea how the fire originated. He had hoped to take on his full cargo this afternoon and sail at high tide for Sydney.

The three firemen placed in ambulances, upon reaching General Hospital, refused to remain at that institution, but after treatment returned to their fire-house. Edward Deane and William Halpin, also members of Engine Company No. 16, were overcome by the smoke, but were revived.

MISS MARGARITA GRACE IS ENGAGED

One of Three Beautiful Sisters to Marry John Phipps, of London.

The engagement of Margarita Grace, daughter of Michael P. Grace, of this city, to John Phipps, of London, was announced to-day in a cablegram received by friends of the young woman.

Miss Grace is one of a number of American girls who have won much admiration abroad by their wit and beauty. For several years she and her two sisters have been known in London society as the "Three Graces." Recently it was reported that Miss Grace was engaged to the Earl of Donoughmore.

LEEAN FOUND GUILTY.

Sentence Suspended Because of His Story of Moore's Attentions to His Wife.

James Leegan, the truck driver of Seventeenth Street and Eighth Avenue, who assaulted Henry C. Moore, an aged man, in the latter's home, No. 250 West Ninety-seventh Street, was tried in the Court of Special Sessions to-day, and found guilty.

Justice Mayer, however, suspended sentence upon hearing Leegan's story, which was to the effect that Moore had been attentive to Mrs. Leegan. The Justice committed Leegan to the Toms until Friday, as he was in a very much excited state of mind, and it was thought best to restrain him temporarily.

A Mix-Up of Remedies.

Mr. John W. Ransome, the comedian, is, physically, of quite ample proportions, a fact which has caused him considerable anxiety. Not long ago he came across an especially persuasive advertisement describing the virtues of a certain remedy for corpulence. Mr. Ransome sent for a bottle, and was amazed to find in three weeks' time that he had lost eleven pounds. Overjoyed, he wrote a letter to the firm testifying to the efficacy of their treatment, and accompanied them to publish it. A few days later he received a reply thanking him for his kindness, but adding: "We have concluded that we will not publish your letter, because, upon reference to our books, we find that by a stupid error on the part of one of our clerks we sent the 'Royal Remedy for corpulence' to you. We are delighted and surprised to learn that it reduced you."

MISS LILLIAN TOMASCH

MISS LILLIAN TOMASCH WITNESS IN THE ROXBURY MURDER CASE.

NEGRO PRISONER IS INDIFFERENT TO FATE.

Throng in Court-Room Pays Less Attention to Him than to Young Woman Who Provoked Widow's Indignant Outburst.

When the trial of Charles Jackson, the colored man charged with the murder of Charles W. Roxbury, was resumed before Recorder Goff today in the Court of General Sessions, Miss Lillian Tomasch, the handsome maid, who was with Mr. Roxbury at the time he was slain, was seated in a conspicuous place in the court room. She was dressed entirely in black, as was also the widow of the murdered man.

Miss Tomasch seemed very much embarrassed, for she was the cynosure of all eyes. The dramatic incident of yesterday, when Mrs. Roxbury refused to take her outstretched hand and denounced her by saying "Keep away from me! Don't you dare approach me!" had wounded Miss Tomasch deeply. She had asserted that her relations with Mr. Roxbury were entirely innocent, and that on the day of the tragedy their meeting had been purely accidental.

Accompanying her were several friends who sympathized with her, believing that she had been placed in a false position. Occasionally they would lean toward her and whisper, but Miss Tomasch only smiled wanly. Mrs. Roxbury, the widow, and Mrs. Eliza Gibson, of No. 32 West Thirty-ninth Street, the mother of the murdered man, glanced at Miss Tomasch once, and then averted their gaze.

Interest in Manicurist.

The interest in the trial to-day was great. More attention was centered on the manicurist than on the prisoner, whom she had identified as the man who struck and robbed Roxbury on lonely River Avenue on the night of July 18 last. The prisoner himself seemed unconcerned. As the evidence accumulated against him he smiled like one who does not realize the seriousness of the situation.

In fact, his demeanor throughout the trial and his actions subsequent to the trial have given the impression that he is mentally incapable of understanding the enormity of his offense. He appears to have no moral responsibility, but as more like one who is being entertained rather than like a man on trial for his life.

Miss Tomasch on the Stand.

The session began with Miss Tomasch on the stand. She was subjected to relentless cross-examination by Lawyer Hal Bell, counsel for the prisoner. He attempted to assail her identification of the negro. Then he began quizzing the witness as to whether at first she had not been reported to be under suspicion as the murderer.

"I never heard of any such thing," replied the witness, with a calm but maintaining unusual calm.

"Do you believe, Miss Tomasch," asked the lawyer incisively, "that Mr. Roxbury would have been killed had he not been in your company?"

"Certainly not," replied the witness with fearful emphasis.

"Would it not be a benefit and protection to you if this prisoner were convicted?"

The young woman spread out her hands helplessly and turning full on the jury responded, sobbingly: "I really do not know what you mean, but if you insinuate that I have any motive for shielding myself by accusing this man you infer what is utterly false."

"Miss Tomasch," asked the lawyer, "why did you not immediately call a policeman after you ran from where Mr. Roxbury was struck?"

The young woman replied that she was so upset that she did not know what to do.

"Were you so afraid of notoriety?"

Quoted the lawyer.

"I returned the witness," calmly returned the witness.

Miss Tomasch had entirely recovered her composure when the defendant's counsel began probing for the merest detail of her actions after leaving the murdered man.

"Did you go home and go to bed that night before notifying any one of the crime?" asked the cross-examiner.

"Yes," barely whispered the witness.

"Did you inform the police when you got up the next morning?"

"I did not," replied the witness.

"Did you telephone to Roxbury's office and conceal your name, on the day after the murder?"

"Yes."

Did Not Meet Daily.

"Were you not in the habit of meeting Mr. Roxbury at One Hundred and Ninety-seventh Street and Jerome Avenue every morning between 7 and 9 o'clock, for more than five years?"

"Yes," replied the witness.

MISS LILLIAN TOMASCH WITNESS IN THE ROXBURY MURDER CASE.

blow fall, as I ran away."

Several witnesses testified to the finding of Roxbury's body and described the scene of the crime, introducing a piece of bloody fence rail in evidence.

Pawned Watch Found.

Detective Sergeant Robert Charlton testified to visiting different pawnshops and finally locating the watch of the murdered man at No. 46 Tenth Avenue.

He also told of the subsequent arrest and identification of Jackson as the man who had pawned the watch. The negro then admitted having pawned the watch, declared the witness, but explained that he had found it in Danbury, Conn.

At the afternoon session Detective Sergeant McCafferty testified to tracing Jackson through Mr. Roxbury's watch, which the negro had pawned. The prosecution made a point of McCafferty's statement that when he accused Jackson of the murder the negro turned pale.

According to McCafferty, Jackson, when under the influence of fear or excitement assumes the complexion of a white man. This was in substantiation of Miss Tomasch's statement that when Jackson confronted her he might have been taken for a white man.

The mother of the murdered man told the jury that she had no intention of repulsing Miss Tomasch in the court-room yesterday. She explained that Jackson was just behind Miss Tomasch and approached her, and that her gesture and her words were not directed at the prisoner and not at the young woman.

ACCUSED OF BIGAMY, PLEADS HYPNOTISM

Frederick W. Dompier, of This City, in Jail at Saratoga on Charge of Marrying Girl There While He Had Wife Here.

(Special to The Evening World.)

SARATOGA, Aug. 28.—Frederick W. Dompier, of New York City, declares he was a victim of hypnotism when on July 19, 1902, he was married in St. Michael's Church, New York City.

That was his statement when placed under arrest yesterday afternoon at a Woodlawn avenue boarding-house and charged with bigamy.

Mrs. Dompier alleges that Dompier committed the crime here on Aug. 9, 1902, when he was married to Marie Appel, a chorinist, by the Rev. Herbert M. Gesner, of the Second Presbyterian Church.

"I am sure," asserts that he knew he had a wife when he married wife No. 2. He waived examination and was held by Police Justice W. J. Delaney for the next day.

Unable to furnish bail, he was lodged in the Saratoga County Jail.

BOY FELL THIRTY FEET.

(Special to The Evening World.)

NEWARK, N. J., Aug. 28.—William Steiner, fifteen years old, employed as a water boy on the new City Hall by E. M. Waldron, a contractor, fell at noon to-day, sustaining fatal injuries. His skull was crushed and several bones were broken. The boy lived with his mother at No. 26 Boyd Street. He was removed to St. Barnabas's Hospital.

MR. THOMAS LIPTON SURE HE'LL GET ONE RACE.

"When I arrived I said that if the Americans wanted to see my three boats race against Reliance, Constitution and Columbia I'd agree, but as only two are in commission Shamrock II would be out of it. I don't know how such a match could be arranged, nor do I know now whether or not I can stay for such an arrangement. I want to hurry back now."

GOOD WISHES FROM AMERICANS.

"I still have a chance left. Every one who has telegraphed me has expressed the hope that I'll win them straight. I have received a stack of telegrams from Americans. Here is one from a Texas gentleman: 'Put out Shamrock and go for three straight.'"

"But lead, of course, might make her go through the water faster. 'There is one thing that must be said for the challenger,' he continued, 'and that is she is certainly a beautiful boat. Just keep your eye on her to-morrow.'"

SATISFIED OF SUPERIORITY OF RELIANCE.

Now that the excitement attending yesterday's contest is over the yachting sharp surrounding Mr. Thomas Lipton have about concluded that Reliance cannot be beaten by the challenger. Every possible condition except sailing in a gale has been met by the yacht in the three times they have tried conclusions and on each occasion Reliance has shown her superiority.

The race scheduled for to-morrow is over a course fifteen miles to windward and return. Reliance showed herself so clearly the superior of Shamrock in this kind of sailing last Saturday that the result appears to be almost a foregone conclusion.

Capt. Bob Wringe is not discouraged at the outcome of the race yesterday. He thinks he can win to-morrow's race and has no patience with those who insist that Reliance can take three straight. Capt. Wringe points to the great improvement of Shamrock in the race yesterday over that of Saturday, and argues that with a continuation of this improvement there can be nothing for the challenger but victory.

IMPROVED FORM IS NOTABLE.

This opinion is to some extent shared by W. G. Kirby, of the Yachting World, of London. He thinks that had the wind freshened for ten minutes at the finish Shamrock would have won the race yesterday and remarks upon the improved form of the challenger. According to Mr. Kirby, Shamrock had not shown until yesterday the form she displayed in her trial races on the other side.

John Herreshoff, brother of Nat, who designed Reliance, says that he was surprised at the closeness of the race and believes Shamrock would have won had she been blessed with a little more luck. Mr. Herreshoff looked for a better showing from Shamrock on a triangular course, but he had no idea that she could give Reliance such a close shave.

John Pearson, of the Yachting World, of London, thinks that Sir Thomas can win the next race. Contrary to the majority of experts, he does not agree that yesterday's contest and weather favored the challenger any more than it did the defender.

Thomas Fleming Day, the American yachting editor, says that if Shamrock could not cross the line ahead yesterday she has no prospect of ever being able to do it.
